Control Your Disk or Hard Drive - Copy any number of files - Minimize unwanted changes - Protect your information - Secure your system - Monitor your disk space - Change encryption/decryption settings - All of these features on the same, professional application. Get it, try it, and use it to secure your system. Install the DrCrypt application to your hard drive or USB. When the program is run, it will check for the existence of a license key file, found in the license folder. If the license key file exists, the DrCrypt application will check to make sure the key is valid. If the license key is valid, the system will begin operating under the default settings. If the license key file does not exist, the DrCrypt application will try to determine if the user has a valid license key to be accepted by the system. If the system is unable to find a valid license key, the DrCrypt application will attempt to find an existing license key. If this is not possible, the system will prompt the user to enter a license key. If the user enters an invalid license key, the system will tell the user the correct key is needed, and proceed to the license validation. If the user enters a valid license key, the system will check to make sure the current license key is valid. If the license key is valid, the system will continue to operate under the default settings. If the license key is expired, the system will inform the user that the license key will be inactive within 48 hours. The system will allow the user to reactivate the license key within that time. The system will allow the user to set multiple license keys for the system, one for normal operation, and one or more license keys that are only used for license validation. The license validation process takes place once every 48 hours. When the license validation process completes, the system will save the current license key settings into the license key file. License Validation: The first time the user runs DrCrypt, the system will check the license key file. If the license key file has not been modified, the system will continue to operate under the default settings. If the license key file has been modified, the system will check to make sure the license key file is valid. If the license key file is valid, the system will continue to operate under the default settings. If the license key file is
